GOD IS LOVE AND NOTHING ELSE.

—PRAISE THE LORD.

LETTER FROM GEORGE O. BARNES.

[Letter from Dayton, Ky., continued. Subject—Col. Ingersoll's rout of the five great champions of christianity.]

I do not charge him with any dishonesty of adroitness in this. He only fairly makes use of his strongest points. We all do this in controversy—religious or secular. It is part of argument to leave our adversaries to discover weaknesses and make their best of them. Perhaps transparent truth would disclose to an opponent the weak spots in our systems—the "joints in our harness." But this superhuman generosity is not possible in a world where it would inevitably be misunderstood and abused; and could only have the effect of weakening the real strength of what is strong, and put the very truth, which we wish to inculcate, at a grievous disadvantage with the very ones we wish to win. I do not know that we are bound to do this, with the world constituted as it is. In the millennium we can afford it. "For the present distress" we must take average humanity as we find it and furnish it as few clubs to break our heads with, as we can; knowing as we do that the temptation to strike is irresistible.

I do not, therefore, blame Col. Ingersoll for cleaving with timidity to the apparently authorized, "winked at," or commanded slavery; polygamy; atrocious murder of women and children; and the shameful slaughter of innocent and helpless dumb brutes, which the "letter" certainly—and the Spirit—ostensibly—of the Old Testament furnish in such manifest profusion. He has an "enlargement of riches" there—a surplus in the treasury, that he hardly knows what to do with. And he, with perfect fairness, and, I must say, admirable temper, makes the most of his wealth. I suspect this knowledge of "unlimited resources" at his disposal, is the secret of his apparent—almost unostentatious—sweetness of temper. I do not suppose he has naturally a better disposition than Drs. Talmage and Field; Professor Fisher, Judge Black or ex-premier Gladstone. But he exceeds them one and all in this sharp controversy, in refusing to take the initiative in personalities. The sharpest thrusts he makes is in parrying these hostile allusions, that else! only betray a weak position. The strong have no necessity to use such weapons. The weak point in the fivefold apologia for christianity from these distinguished men lies in the full, fatal but wholly unnecessary admission of the facts in the case, as Col. Ingersoll presents them. Starting thus with an unconscious, but real betrayal of the cause they defend, they henceforth flounder in a quagmire of indefensible explanations; like Dr. Talmage's astounding exposition of the architecture of Noah's ark; or the gastric energy of Jonah's whale; or Judge Black's defense of Jewish chattel slavery as a benevolent, divine institution; or else take refuge in "mysterious Providence," that confound all right and wrong, and leave poor humanity "at sea" without rudder, chart or compass. I do not wonder, that, with the assumption of such false ground, the infidel publication association are quite content to scatter broadcast copies of this controversy, as "campaign documents." A badly conducted defense of a good cause would destroy it more effectually than any attack, however vigorous or plausible.

"Save me from my friends!" Who said it? Never mind. It was well said. "If it had been an enemy, I could have borne it; but it was my own familiar friend, in whom I trusted!" Alas! for any cause, when its friends become willfully or unwittingly its worst foe! With the very best intentions then, and a loyalty none can doubt, these brave defenders of christianity have done it unspcakable damage with the very people they wished to influence. For they could accomplish little by confirming those already convinced. But the wavering have been lost by shoals and the obstinate are doubly "set in their ways" by those untenable defenses of the Truth. It is not the fault of the "Big Five" so much as of the system that held them hand-tied while it sent them into the arena to overcome a giant athlete. The victor! If there be not a turn for the better, a tidal wave of scepticism will soon bring to pass the Savior's prophecy: "Nevertheless when the Son of Man cometh shall He find faith on the earth?"

And now that "a last word to Col. Robt. G. Ingersoll" has been spoken, which, to me, seems but a Partisan shot, from one in full retreat, yet holding fast with dogged persistence to his preconceived opinions—men are asking with perplexity: Is there no divine highway in which honest manhood may walk without on the one hand becoming "agnostic," or, on the other, hold to views abhorrent to the loving heart, better enshrined in human credos or not? I believe with all my heart there is.

For the sake of devil-oppressed humanity let us hope it may be found.

"Surely there is a vein where the gold is found," all buried in the dirt and rubbish of ages, as it now may lie. If I understand Col. Ingersoll's strong point of attack it is this:

The Bible, and therefore the God of the Bible, connives at slavery; countenances, at least, polygamy; and commands absolutely what men call murder. In the lurid glare of these atrocious crimes, the subsidiary wrongs of the lower creation vanish, or sink into comparative insignificance; though, in themselves, they constitute a strong count in the indictment, as being also most outrageous and unjust. Col. Ingersoll insists that his mental and moral make-up compels him to go without a God, rather than have one Who did such things, or permitted them to be done, approvingly. For one, I confess that I heartily go with him here. And I think that, ulterior consequences apart, every honest man on earth would make the same choice. When, however, the supposed alternative is presented, of believing it, or being damned forever, anyone will halt, and if there be no relief, would rather be impaled on the horns of faith than that of scepticism; simply because the consequences of the latter are deemed irretrievable. The moment, however, his mind can shake off the incubus of eternal damnation, as Col. Ingersoll has done, he recoils from accepting the dogma of this atrocious Jehovah, with an alacrity that shows how strongly entrenched in the human heart is the unwillingness to believe in such a God. But, on the other hand, if a reasonable explanation is offered, that the imprisoned spirit of man can lay hold of, that will exonerate God from blame, then the strong temptation to throw overboard the existence, personality and work of God is gone at once. I don't believe men are fools by first choice. I believe all make a struggle, however feeble or ineffectual, to know God. It is part of our make-up. We can't help it. But the "flesh is weak," the "devil" is strong; the "world" is very alluring. With this trinity of evil against a man, how easily he goes down!

Right here our gospel comes in; and I humbly but firmly maintain that it does furnish a standing ground; a solidus, where soul-tried men can find rest—some rest, at least. And if it only set forth a possible ground to stand upon, that is something. And were that ground narrowed to a jeweler's point, piercing each foot that stood upon it, that, even, would be better than the dread alternative—no God; or a God we are ashamed of, in our heart of hearts. But it does more than this, I contend. It gives us back, from robber hands, the bright light that been snatched from men—the God of LOVE and Nothing Else—the God we really want and cannot do without.

I only wish to live to be used in this work of restitution in my generation; and to be remembered in the grateful hearts of those who have been delivered from a bondage far worse than physical death.

Ever in Jesus, GEO. O. BARNES.

IN MEMORIAM.

On the night of the 3rd of July, 1888, the death angel spread his sable pinions over the beautiful "Lynn Home" and stayed not his terrible hand until his icy fingers had touched almost every treasure of the household. His first victim was Sallie Craig, daughter of A. C. and Alice Lynn Tucker, aged nine years. She was a child of rare beauty and intelligence, and the grief of the stricken family seemed greater than they could bear. Just one week from the day the victor's crown was placed on her beautiful curls, its radiance was blending with that of her father. Just as she was about to meet him at "Lynn Home" to lead him, with prattling voice to the house, we can see her meet him at the peatly gates to show him the treasures she had found in a sweeter home. The next stage in launch in the dark river was that of the head of the family, that noble and grand old man, Craig Lynn. Scarcely had his feet touched the other shore, when Nannie Belle Tucker called to him out of the chilly mist of Jordan, "Wait, Grandpa, I am coming," and those strong, loving arms where she had slept for four years were outstretched to receive her, and then oh! such a glorious reunion in Heaven. While our imagination pictures the beautiful scene over there, our tears with sympathy to the two bereaved widows at "Lynn Home." One of them, our dear Alice, is bereft of father, husband and both children, but our Heavenly Father does not forsake her. He has given a promise that he will be all to her. Trust him fully, truly and bleeding heart and His grace will sustain you. Lonely ones, behold the beautiful chain of four bright, new links, four crowns of glory, four unspotted robes, four voices tuned to heavenly praise, and know that the four dead—Sallie, the four coffin, the four graves, are earthly things that are eclipsed by heaven's glory. Follow little Nannie's pleading upward gaze as her spirit left for the grand reunion, that you may lengthen the chain and join them in the celestial chorus by-and-by. Try to feel, dear ones, that What tho' your hearts are yearning, For the loved of long ago, Bitter lessons sadly learning, From the shadowy page of woe. If you've Jesus, Jesus only, He'll be with you to the end, And unseen by mortal vision, Angel bands will o'er you bend. ISABEL TUCKER.

LANCASTER, GARRARD COUNTY.

—There has been a reasonable response to the call for aid for the yellow fever sufferers.

—The young men will give a hope at Walker & Doty's new livery stable Friday evening. This is a novel place, but a good one.

—Mrs. C. W. Sweeney and Miss Kate Walker, delegates to the W. C. T. U. State Convention at Glasgow, left for that place this morning.

—Elder Cline preached an interesting sermon at the Christian church last Sunday, on the duties of elders and deacons. He thinks it scriptural for the women to hold office in the church. Some of the sisters now wear a very suave, won't-you-vote-for-me smile.

—Geo. D. Burdett, now prospecting in Wyoming and Colorado, writes us a cheery letter, filled with praises of the West, but the unwritten sentences between the lines betray his yearning for the old State, ever the best among them all.

—The News says one of its stockholders has become correspondent for the J. J. Yes, having placed the News on a solid foundation and launched it in the highway of success, we have now entered a larger field and purpose pulling the J. J. through.

—Some of our lovers of music are talking of organizing for the purpose of producing the Cantata of Beethoven. These entertainments are always instructive and enjoyable, and as we have talent here to present this cantata in a charming manner, we trust rehearsal will begin at once.

What a highly protected lot is that of the man who owns a horse. If he wants to get his horse shod, he goes to the Smith who uses a shoe taxed at 51 per cent, fastened on by nails taxed at 76 per cent, which are driven by a hammer taxed at 15 per cent. The bits and all metal used about his harness is taxed at 30 to 47 per cent, while the harness or the material in it is taxed at 20 per cent. The binder his wagon is made of is taxed at 20 per cent, while the iron or steel axles are taxed at 62 per cent. The tires on the wheels are taxed at 46 per cent, fastened on by nails taxed at 76 per cent. The farmer now climbs into his wagon dressed in his suit of woolen clothes taxed at 70 per cent, with his feet shod in shoes the material of which is taxed at 30 per cent, with a protected hat on his head and protected gloves on his hands and settles himself back, cracks his whip over his rig, protected from the tip of his horse's nose to the hind part of his wagon, and starts gleefully away, feeling that the republicans have made this a highly protected country.—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Why.—A noted Sunday-school worker living in Kansas was once asked to talk to the children of a Sunday-school on the subject of temperance. He is very earnest in the cause and wears a bit of blue ribbon as a badge of his principles. Rising before the school he pointed to his bit of blue ribbon and said: "Now, can any of you children give me a reason why I am not a drunkard?" There was no reply for a moment; then a child's little voice in the rear of the room piped out: "Cause this is a prohibition town!"—[Youth's Companion.

At a prayer meeting in an East Side Mission the other day an ex-drunkard in a "soul sincerity" and without the least intentional humor in giving his "experience," thus summed up the prohibition question: "I thought that I might be able to reform if I could get away from the temptation to drink, so when I heard they had prohibition in Kansas I settled out there; but it was no good. Why, in three weeks I found myself keeping a prosperous saloon."—[N. Y. Tribune.

SHE WAS DECEITFUL.—One of the illustrated papers prints a portrait of a lady at Saratoga who has 300 dresses. A careful study of the portrait suggests the inquiry as to why she didn't put one on when she sat for her picture.—[Augusta Chronicle.

"What a simple and modest bathing suit Miss Spider always wears," remarked the minister. "Yes," remarked Miss Veracity, unconsciously, "You will always find a girl modest at the seaside when she weighs only 85 pounds."

—W. B. Huston, of Lexington, traveling in the interest of the Equitable Life Insurance Company, has been here several days. I recognize in Billy a valued friend and classmate of college days, and enjoyed largely the opportunity to call up the memories of "life's young dream."

—A party consisting of Misses Minnie and Mattie Dinwiddie, Mary T. Green and Annie McKinney, escorted by Mess. James Harper and Calvin Carpenter, went to Boyle Thursday to assist at the marriage of John Dinwiddie, Jr., and Miss Tarkington. Miss Bertie Newland, of Danville, is visiting her sister, Mrs. James Taylor.

—The sickness of several of our young people is casting a gloom over our village. In addition to the case of Givens Kennedy, reported last week, we have to notice the serious illness of James B. Cook and Fred Paeckel, the last especially threatening, being a pronounced case of typhoid fever. Miss Weatherford is reported as improving.

—We had another tempest on Friday night. The storm cloud howled dismally the lightning flashed in terrific splendor and the crashing thunder gave grandeur to the "war of the elements," while the atmosphere seemed to be suddenly liquefied and pouring itself out a ceaseless torrent. The whole thing called up forcibly Burn's description of "Tom O'Shanter's night ride, in which he says: "That night a cold might understand The Devil had business on his hand."

W. P. WALTON.

The great Carlisle says of the brave and true man who occupies the White House: "I think I may say without presumption that I have a tolerably fair acquaintance with Grover Cleveland, and know something of his opinions, something of his impulses, something of his purposes to serve the people and the country; and I may say here, without reservation, that I have never known a man, in public or private life, who was so anxious to perform his whole duty to the people and to the country as Grover Cleveland. He may make mistakes, as all of us make mistakes; but I can say to this people that never, so long as he occupies that presidential office, will he knowingly or intentionally perform an act or recommend an act to the injury of any part of the people of this great country, whether they be laboring men or capitalists." This is the manner of man the democracy calls on you to support. Most all honest men will do so.

The leaders of the political prohibitionists in this country are mainly republicans, who would do anything to advance the interests of the g. o. p. They are well aware that their man Noxe stands no more chance for election than a powder-house in hades does of remaining intact, and that the only possible result of his candidacy might be the defeat of McCreary, yet they are willing to do what they can to compass it by drawing votes from him which properly belong to the democratic party. Let no democrat be deceived by them. The republicans will do a deal of prohibition talk, but when it comes to voting they generally stick to their first love. It is only the men who really belong to the democratic party that seem willing to throw away their votes in a hopeless contest.

The republican speakers and writers endeavor to hoodwink the ignorant by saying the importer pays the tariff and not the consumer. The importer simply advances the tax, which he afterwards adds to the cost of the articles imported, and every man who buys them pays the tax in the advanced prices that the tariff occasions. Bear it in mind always that the tariff is a tax and that it is finally paid by the consumer, and give no heed to republican lies, whose only hope of regaining power lies in deception and chicanery.

An exchange very truly says that there is no issue in this country between free trade and protection. The issue is between excessive and reasonable taxation. Between the present war tariff and a reasonable reduction. Between free raw material and protection on manufactures and taxed raw material and protected goods. Any man or newspaper that says this is not true, lies, and does it for the purpose of deceiving and cheating the people of this country, and for no other purpose; but it will fall as sure as time continues.

Tax bill to make the Department of Agriculture one of the executive departments of the government has passed both Houses, but the Senate refused to pass the House provision in it, to give the department control over the weather service, and a conference committee has been appointed. It will likely compromise the difference and then some politician, who knows no more about farming than Horace Greeley did, will be appointed to sit in the cabinet as the representative of the farming interest.

GEN. O'BRIEN, who always manages to corral a credulous reporter when he goes to the cities, has been telling a Commercial-Gazette man that the republican outlook in Kentucky this fall is very flattering for the republicans, who will not only reelect three Congressmen, but make a gain of two. The general is great on loving to hear himself talk, which he does without thought, never having learned to think, and without regard to the truth, never having been built that way.

CAN'T some of our silver-tongued orators be induced to come to Lincoln and give our people some good old democratic music, that will do them good? "Jim" McKenzie, for instance, might make us a visit, if the electors are too busy to visit us. The Central Committee must not neglect us, as it seems disposed to do.

AFTER holding a convention and canvassing the question, the Texas republicans decided not to nominate a State ticket, as there was no probability of election, and adjourned. The Texas republicans are probably no better than a majority of their party, but this conclusion shows that they are much wiser.

COL. SWORE gives it out that hereafter he will not debate with such "scrubs" as Hallam, Rhea or McKenzie, but if the democrats wish him to back up against Carlisle, Beck or Blackburn he is ready to do so. Pray what has this Armstrong Miller been feeding on that he has grown great?

—The Deaf and Dumb Institute at Danville has 120 white and 20 colored students we learn from the Deaf Mute, which resumed publication with the opening of the session.

The terrible yellow scourge increases and widens its devastating touch in the stricken South and the cry of distress and despair which comes from there is heart-rending. The total number of cases in Jacksonville reach nearly 2,000 and the deaths over 200. Numerous cases and deaths having occurred in Decatur, Ala., the inhabitants have fled from their homes till less than 200 of its white population remain. Many of the cities and towns have established strict quarantine against it and the other infected points to the refugees and thither they are flying for life. The accounts of the sufferings and fears of the panic-stricken populace, which appear in the dailies, is enough to melt the hearts of the most obdurate and cause them to do all that money can for their relief.

The local editor of the Richmond Register, Mr. Clarence E. Woods, devotes a half column to a notice of the Kentucky Press Association minutes, recently gotten out by this office, which the secretary highly appreciates and hereby gratefully acknowledges.

lie debt; it has reduced the expenses of the government $15,000,000, thus saving a nice little sum for the tax paying people, and at the same time has paid out for pensions more money than was ever paid before in the same length of time; it has repealed the odious tenure of office act; has reduced the fees on postal money orders and extended the benefit of the free delivery system. But we cannot begin to enumerate all it has done in one issue of this paper.

KNIFE.—John Wilson Clements, auctioneer, boarded the south-bound passenger train at London Sunday, purchased 10 cents' worth of peaches from the newsboy and was waiting for change when the train started. He died shortly after the operation.

DEATH.—Mr. Mack Huffman, undertaker, received a dispatch Saturday to forward a casket to Williamsburg for Miss Kate, daughter of Congressman Finley, who died of typhoid fever. Rev. FOWLE, Esq., alias the "Little Red Hog," has donned the war paint and Saturday panned down upon the inoffensive citizens of Highland and vicinity without previous announcement, so far as we know. Last night he was to have held forth in the Court-House here, but we went to press before the hour fixed for the show. In the meantime Gov. McCreary is at his post in Washington, attending to the business he was chosen to perform, confident that the advantage his opponent is taking of him will inure to his benefit.

Noon, the prohibition candidate for Congress, was speaking to a small crowd when our reporter left Lancaster yesterday. He is not a taking speaker by any means, but is a man of pretty fair presence.

This report that a man had been found dead in a field, near Mr. John Bright's, on being run down proved to have originated in the finding of a man in an unconscious state, who upon being revived said his name was Hathaway and that he had taken too much morphine, to which habit he was addicted. Unfortunately it didn't kill him.
